HOW TO RELIEVE DYSPEPSIA

Don't Overeat, Keep Away From the Food That Disagrees With You and Heed Your Doctor.

Simple dyspepsia is that form of indigestion that is not caused by any lesion or malformation of the stomach or other digestive organs. People differ widely in the strength of their digestive apparatus, but most adults know something of the symptoms of simple dyspepsia. In fact, most people expect, and bear with resignation, an occasional attack of indigestion. It is when the attacks come too often and stay too long—when the sufferer becomes a dyspeptic—that he seeks relief.

In a case where the usual home remedies for impaired digestion are no longer efficacious and the continual attacks begin to affect the general health, it is necessary to go to a good doctor and ask him to find the underlying cause of the trouble. There are many reasons for the failure of the digestive powers that lie quite beyond the scope of amateur diagnosis, with its dangerous accompaniment—amateur dosing; although there are, of course, many other reasons that any intelligent person can search out for himself.

Too many people become chronic dyspeptics because they will not learn to masticate properly, to refrain from hearty meals when they are tired, or to deny themselves articles of food that experience has shown to be indigestible. That form of dyspepsia is not in itself hard to cure, but those who suffer from it are often very difficult to handle. They are likely to have their pet remedy—a soda tablet, or what not—which often does good service for years, but is bound to fail in the end. Then nothing can be done for them unless they learn self-control.

Sometimes—indeed often—the trouble is with the teeth, which have been neglected until they cannot properly chew the food. People who are worried and overdriven are almost sure to have weak digestions. That form of dyspepsia yields quickly to a good rest and tonic treatment. If that cannot be had, try a brief rest just after eating. That is a wise economy for even the busiest people. Abdominal massage is good for toning up the muscles of the stomach. As for diet and medicine, the doctor in charge is the best judge, for no two cases are exactly alike.

BIG PREMIUMS OFFERED AT 1916 STATE FAIR DAIRY CATTLE DIVISION RECEIVES PROMINENT ATTENTION.

One of the most valuable features of any State Fair is found in the section devoted to exhibits of dairy cattle, and this is particularly true of the great State Fair of Texas, which has, during recent years, progressed to recognized leadership this division.

F. F. Sliney, of Dallas, who is director in charge of this department, recently announced that unusually valuable premiums are to be offered by the State Fair of Texas this year for Dairy Cattle exhibits—and that much new work would feature this division. The Dairy Demonstration tests, according to Mr. Sliney, will be conducted this year under the direct personal supervision of a member of the United States Department of Agriculture, and the system of awarding premiums which will be used has been carefully devised to give all entries an equal chance. Economical production cost will be the deciding factor, and this will be established by applying a scientific "point" system originated at one of the government experiment stations.

It is strongly urged that farmer throughout the State enter their dairy stock in this Demonstration, and it will be to the advantage of each individual farmer to do so, for the actual value of each animal as a profit maker will be definitely established through these tests. The Dairy Demonstration tests will continue for 12 days and will undoubtedly be one of the most interesting features connected with the 1916 State Fair of Texas.

Mr. Sliney further announces that the Fair will open October 14, and continue to and through October 29.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

"So you've invested your money in a new ship company?" "Yes. If our airship goes up, the stock will go up." "But suppose it does not?" "Then the company will go up."—Boston Transcript.

BULLETIN FAN.

"That was a great game yesterday." "It sure was. I wouldn't have missed it for anything." "I didn't see you there." "You didn't? Why, I was right up in the front row, next to the bulletin board."

Knew Them Intimately.

Mrs. Just Got Rich—Oh, we had the most delightful trip to Europe. Mrs. Stay at Home—How lovely. Did you see the Dardanelles? Mrs. Just Got Rich—Heavens, yes; why we took supper with them.

Sayings of the Daughter.

"It's hard to be a hero to your own daughter." "What's the matter now?" "My child looked me over this morning and said: 'Pa. Ma surely must have married you for your money.'"

He Was Right.

"I tell you, my friend," said the campaign orator, "the laboring classes are the backbone of the country." "That's right," responded a man in the gallery. "We have to support the whole blame shooting match."

HIGH COST OF LIFE.

WHEN LOVE WAS YOUTHFUL.

The Little Girl With a Pigtail and Skinny Legs is Sweet Memory to Dayton Journal Man.

Did you marry your first little sweetheart, she of the pinafore frock, and, perhaps, the barber-pole stockings? It is certain that at times she wore a cute little braided queue, though sometimes—when she was dressed up—her hair hung in curls down her slender back. How the sun glistened in those curls, making them to shine with a splendor akin to that which lights the wing of drifting angels in the dreams of night!

Do you remember where you stood when you first kissed her? Of course, you do, says a writer in the Dayton (O.) Journal. That is an incident which is graven in our memory forever and ever. You felt thrillingly and chilly and warm and were half scared to death. You saw God in her eyes and felt him in your soul. Wouldn't you give all you have, or ever expect to have, in exchange for the innocence of your heart as it beat that day against the little throbbing heart in her tender breast?

But did you marry her? Some syndicate writer is asking the question, and promises soon to tell us all about it, provided a lot of people will first write letters telling her all about it. Perhaps you married this little woman of dreams, and perhaps you did not. The chances are that you did not. But you will remember the sweet ache that troubled your soul in the days when you were wooing her with a chivalry unknown to all who have passed beyond the heavenland of childhood.

When you think of her now your soul yearns backward to that never-never land, and maybe the moisture of sweet sad tears fills your eye. Did you marry her? Did you?

If you did, then, sometimes, when you take her hand, in the quiet of a summer evening, together you may read the palmist of memory, joying as it is given to but few mortals to rejoice.

DANGER LIES IN BOILED EGG

Scientists Discover Deadly Germs in Poultry Product—Buy Only Fresh Eggs.

The fact that hens having certain diseases well known to chicken fanciers lay eggs from which come chicks that soon develop the parental disease led Dr. Leo F. Rettger, Thomas G. Hull and William S. Sturges of the Sheffield laboratory, Yale university, and the Storrs agricultural experiment station, to investigate the possibility of such eggs being injurious to man.

Doctor Rettger is the discoverer of the so-called bacterium pullorum, which makes the hen sick, is in her egg when it is laid and then makes the chicken that is hatched sick. He and his associates report to the Journal of Experimental Medicine that adult fowls and young rabbits, to which they fed infected eggs, soon died, that kittens and guinea pigs showed signs of poisoning, but that rats were unaffected.

They did not feed infected eggs to human beings, but they cooked them in several ways and then examined them for the bacteria. Boiling for five minutes did not destroy these. Poaching made the eggs sterile. Frying on one side had no effect, but frying on both sides destroyed the disease germs. Coddling was effective only when continued for at least five minutes.

Cases of poisoning, sometimes on a wide scale, after eating eggs are quite common. So is the infection of fowls. "Hence," say these experimenters in their report, "a large proportion of the marketed eggs is infected with bacterium pullorum." They warn consumers against any eggs but those that are quite fresh, as the bacteria in them develop very rapidly, especially in summer.

ONCE WAS ENOUGH.

An old countryman lost his barn by fire. They said at the time that it was insured for more than the building was worth and that he was not sorry to see the old shed destroyed. Unfortunately for his hopes, however, the insurance people took advantage of an option in their policy and replaced the barn instead of giving him the money, greatly to his disgust.

Not long afterward the traveling agent of a life insurance company came into the village and, among others, solicited the old man to effect an insurance on his life.

"No, no," said the farmer; "I should feel as tho I were going to die tomorrow."

"Well," said the agent facetiously, "if that is the case, take one on your wife."

"No you don't catch me there, either," chuckled the old man. "I know the way of your insurance chaps. You would just go and give me another old one even worse than the first."

No girl can successfully masticate fudge and nurse a case of disappointment at the same time.

A man's wife generally figures among the things he classifies as circumstances over which he has no control.

When a mother tells a bachelor about the cute things her baby did he never says just what he thinks.

There is method in some people's madness, they say, but method never yet saved madness from disaster.

Riches may not bring happiness, but they have at least one advantage over poverty—they don't prevent it.

The average woman doesn't believe in the equality of the sexes. She thinks she is a little more than equal.

The average woman swallows flat. A man who has a good opinion of himself is often a poor judge of human nature.

Love may never die, but it gets seasick at times.

WONDERS OF SCIENCE.

A camera man, working for the educational department of a firm company, met an old farmer coming out of a house in one of the Middle States and explained his presence on the place thus:

"I have just been taking some moving pictures of life on your farm."

"Did you catch any of my laborers in motion?" asked the old man curiously.

"Sure, I did!" The farmer shook his head reflectively, and then said: "Science is a wonderful thing."

LITERAL-MINDED MAID.

The favored suitor rang the doorbell. "Is Miss Blank at home?" he inquired.

"Oh, yes, sir," replied the maid, and she ushered him into the drawing room.

Having waited for almost an hour he summoned the maid again.

"Did you forget to tell Miss Blank that I was here?" he asked impatiently.

"No, sir," was the reply. "Miss Blank hasn't got back from shopping yet."

"But you said she was at home." "Yes, sir. She told me positively that she was always at home to you, sir."

FAMOUS PONIES AT STATE FAIR

BUSCH ENTRY ALSO FEATURES FAMOUS CATTLE

President R. E. L. Knight of the State Fair of Texas, announces that, through the courtesy of Mr. August A. Busch of St. Louis, visitors to the State Fair this year will have an opportunity to see Mr. Busch's wonderful herd of prize-winning Dexter cattle. This will be the first exhibit of true Dexters ever shown in the South.

Mr. Busch has been interested in Dexters for several years, and has gathered together the most wonderful collection of individuals ever seen in one herd. In fact, it is the only considerable collection now owned in this country and is expected to be one of the most interesting features of the 1916 State Fair.

The Dexter a Profitable Animal.

The Dexter is a representative of the diminutive Irish cattle that are world-famous for producing meat and milk of exceptional quality. Though its origin is clouded in obscurity, it is probably a member of the celebrated Kerry family of cattle, as the two breeds have many common characteristics. Its small size, and proportionately small cost of production, should warrant the interest of American cattle raisers, especially when it is considered that the Dexter is a prolific producer of high quality milk, and that its meat will compare most favorably with the breeds now highest in the favor of American stockmen.

The small size of the Dexter will be realized when the statement is made that famous bulls of the breed have weighed, at maturity, about 500 pounds—with the cows scaling a considerably less figure. The average adult stands about 36 inches high and is sturdily and compactly built, showing great depth of rib and general "beefiness."

Bevo Ponies to Be Shown.

In addition to his Dexters, Mr. Busch will show his world-famous stable of Bevo ponies. These wonderfully handsome little fellows—really horses in miniature, are undoubtedly the best specimens now in America. They are all of one size, 42 inches high, and are remarkably alike in color and general conformity. Mr. Busch states that he will show his Bevos to harness; four-in-hand, six-in-hand, tandem, etc.

W. H. Stratton, secretary of the Fair Association, states that efforts have been made during each of the past several years to induce Mr. Busch to make these exhibits, and that their acquisition for this year's Fair is of the utmost value and importance. Mr. Stratton also states that one of the handsome new barns, which are now being constructed, will be reserved for the exclusive use of the Busch exhibits, and that there is no doubt but what these exhibits will be of great interest to a majority of the 1916 Fair visitors.

The wonderful increase in facilities provided for the 1916 State Fair of Texas, which will be held in Dallas October 14 to 29, has been extended to include practically all departments and divisions of the Fair. In the classes for agricultural and livestock entries this increase has been most marked, especially in the poultry section, where numerous new and interesting classifications have been created.
